This Way to His Heart!

"Feed 'Em and Reap" is what we always say — when we're lucky enough to have someone to listen. Even the most reluctant party-goer among your crew-cut friends is likely to enjoy himself when he has eaten his way through the evening. You won't catch them biting the hand that has fed them this lush mush.

Soup Sandwich—Believe it or not, teenage lowbrows spread canned mushroom soup (undiluted and unheated, but seasoned) on white bread, which they roll and hold with a toothpick and then toast in the oven—Mm-Mm, Good!"

Hot Potato—You don't have any more potato juice at your party than they have in Brazil, but you do have hot sweet potatoes with tops cut off and covered with gooseneck hot marshmallow. Quick, Dick — the Drool Cup!

To Each His Own—A new custom at teenage parties is to give the guests the fixin's and let them assemble their own sandwiches. Wait till you see the major engineering projects that can rise up between two slabs of bread!

Cupcake Delights—There's no slip twist the cupcake and the lip when you scoop out the center and fill with vanilla pudding. Top with a cherry and watch everybody light up—and bite up!

Alive With Jive

Remember our report on elasticized satin pantie girdles with jive talk and pictures printed all over them? Well, they were intended to be worn under your clothes for curve control, but lots of girls have brought them out to the open as swim trunks with separate halter tops. For a companion piece we can't think of anything groovier than the new jam session T shirt—a white cotton knit job with jive words and giddy pictures printed all over it.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1 Taken like a tonic, Cardui helps build appetite, aid digestion,* thus help build resistance for the "time" to come.

2 Started 3 days before your time,* it tends relieve pain due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

Dehorning Instruments Spread Common Disease

A cattle disease known as anaplasmosis has gained a serious foothold in the United States and is more prevalent than most folks realize.

It is a febrile, infectious, protozoan disease that may be chronic or acute. It attacks older animals mostly. Average mortality ranges from 30 to 50 per cent of animals affected. Clinical symptoms are similar to tick fever.

Treatment is still in the experimental stage. The disease probably is spread by insect bites. Many cases coming to the attention of bureau of animal industry investigators have followed mechanical dehorning when too little or no attention had been given to disinfecting instruments.

If calves have horn buttons removed when young, by means of chemical dehorning fluid, the danger of spreading the disease by dehorning tools is eliminated.

This Land of Ours Must Now Be Saved

One of the greatest costs of the war, to America, was the depletion of her soil. Demands for increased production, forcing of land without returning necessary food, shortage of fertilizer and the lack of labor to properly plant soil protecting crops has resulted in erosion and barren soil in hundreds of thousands of acres of land.

Entries in the 1947 Lynchburg Farm Show by members of the Appomattox and Pamplin Chapters of the Future Farmers of America won a record number of prizes, according to Henry B. Park and J. M. Campbell, instructors of Vocational Agriculture in Appomattox County.

Twenty-eight Future Farmers of America from the two chapters entered 96 exhibits, which won a total of $161.00. Judges and spectators agreed that this year's showing at the Farm Show was the highest quality in its history. All the records for attendance and number of entries were broken in the annual fourteen county event.

Of the County FFA members, Tim Coleman won the highest number of prizes, taking nine ribbons, including second in red clover, first in lespedeza, first in rye grass, first wheat sheaves, second clover sheaf, first alfalfa hay, second lespedeza hay, third herd's grass, third sweet potatoes, first reseated chairs.

Other winners in the crop contest were: Carl Glover, Tom Marshall, Donald Ferguson, Temple Paulette, Charlie Harvey, Lloyd Coleman, Hugh Tanner, William Hicks, Tom Moore, Fred Jones, J. Stewart, Charlie Harvey, Vernon Beasley. In the livestock division: William Hicks, Wilbur Maxwell, Carl Glover and J. Stewart.

A Whole City of New Customers

Speaking of current problems, the Virginia Electric and Power Company has experienced most all the problems of the present day in connecting up 38,394 new customers since V-J Day (August 14, 1945) through June 30, 1947.

If all of these new customers were in one city, Vepco would have added a completely electrified city to its system with a population of approximately 150,000, a city somewhat larger than the 1940 Census population of Norfolk, and over four times the size of the city of Alexandria, per 1940 Census.

Connecting up that many customers in that space of time is not too difficult in normal times. But with acute shortages in necessary transformers and other line equipment, a shortage of transportation facilities, and with right-of-way and other engineering problems constantly to contend with . . . it's a good record.

But Vepco is not resting on its laurels. Many other applicants are yet to be served and so the work will go on until the last one is connected.

To the appeals of those yet unserved, Vepco's best answer lies in the millions of dollars now being spent, and in the plans now in the making for spending more millions for the building of more power stations, more substations and more lines to reach everyone desiring service. Certainly, Vepco is as eager to serve you as you are to have Electric Service.

"Here's the way I look at it. I can think things out to a pretty good answer—if I can get the facts. I can make up my own mind, if I know what's really going on. And, believe me, it's the free press of this country that keeps you and me and the rest of our people out of the dark—so we can stand up for what we think is right!"

This nation has just observed National Newspaper Week—a tribute to a free American press. "Freedom of the Press" is no mere slogan in America. It is the foundation upon which our freedom rests. Thomas Jefferson recognized this great truth when he said, "Our liberty depends upon the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost."

In this country, we want the facts. Our newspapers give us the facts . . . the good with the bad. And that is the way we like it.

Up through the years, we have learned that light and truth are the greatest safeguards of democracy. In the future, as in the past, the people of this nation shall continue to look to, and depend upon, our great, free press to give us light and truth — for the free American newspapers are the first line of defense in our determination to preserve and hold fast to the American way of life.
